Missing teenager found

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

After almost 16 hours of being missing in the bush north of Big Hawk Lake, Matthew Coleman was found by the Ontario Provincial Police helicopter unit on Thursday morning.

The 17-year-old was camping with 22 students and two teachers from Gordon Graydon Memorial High School in Mississauga.

Constable Harry Rawluk says the teenager left his classmates' campsite on the Kennisis River, north of Big Hawk Lake, to go looking for wood at 6:30 p.m. on May 22. When he still had not returned, two members of the camp paddled to the only light they could see, which was at Jim Perkins' cottage.

"They paddled quite a ways from where they were near Crab Rapids to find me. They did a fantastic job, were very calm, cool and responsible," says Perkins.

He had come up to his boat-access-only cottage for the first time this week to open it up for the summer. He says it was quite the surprise to find two teenagers, a boy and a girl, at his door late at night. No one has ever asked him for help before.

Perkins took the pair by boat across the lake over to where his car was parked and then drove them to Big Hawk Landing Marina.

They had called for emergency services from

Carnarvon Lumber
co-owner talks about the demise of his company

by ALLISON TAYLOR
Times staff

Little did Rick Bailey know that a phone call at 3:30 p.m. on May 16 would change his life forever.

By the time the co-owner of Carnarvon Lumber and Building Supplies hung up the receiver, he was faced with the daunting task of not only closing the doors on 29 years of his family's involvement with the venerable business, but he also had to explain to the 17 people he employed that they shouldn't show up for work the next day.

A Toronto-based buying group, Castle, paid the lumber store's large debt to a local bank and had therefore bought the company from under the long-time Highland resident.

"I had no say at that point, it was all happening so quickly," Bailey says from the kitchen table in his Haliburton home on Halbiem Crescent last week. "I was told what was going to happen and I was told what to do."

That phone call told Bailey to shut the doors and to expect a representative from the buying group and a trustee to arrive at the retail store on May 17th. Bailey did not want to name the bank nor the buying company involved in the take-over.

"It felt like I was losing a member of the family," Bailey said, as tears started to well up in his eyes.

While the sudden closing of the store did come as a shock to Bailey, he says it wasn't something that happened over night and that Perkins' cottage around 10 p.m. and the Stanhope Fire Department along with the Minden detachment OPP had agreed to meet them at the landing.

Jim Hicks, marina owner, provided boats and gas to the search effort and was ferrying people up and down the lake for a water search.

Hicks says Camp Kandalore, who was guiding the group, is a responsible outfit and this is the first time in three years to his knowledge they have needed assistance. However, Hicks says this kind of search, the first this season, is another indication of the strain on the area with larger volumes of people coming through the Frost Centre and he expects before summer over is more people will need assistance.

The volunteers from the fire department were out until 3 a.m. and others helped until the morning when the special police units arrived.

The OPP called in a broad range of resources including their helicopter unit, marine unit, Emergency Response Team, Snowmobile/All-Terrain/Vessel Enforcement Unit, canine unit and the assistance of the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources.

Rawluk says whenever they call out the helicopter they usually find what they are looking for.

He was happy to report Coleman was found at 10 a.m. the following morning on Nunikani Lake. The helicopter unit spotted him approximately two kilometres from where he had last been seen and ground crews were directed to his location.

Coleman was cold and tired but did not require medical attention before he was reunited with his fellow classmates.

Five minutes from devastation

A brush fire at the Woodland Ranch near Peterson Road last week destroyed around seven acres of wilderness, but damage could have been much worse, says Stanhope Fire Chief John Hogg. "The owner stated he put ashes on the field not realizing they were warm," Hogg said, "it was a careless use of ashes." The Fire Department arrived promptly and managed to beat the flames before they advanced to an area of pine trees, Hogg said. "If it had been another five or ten minutes, it could've been a major forest fire." No charges have been laid against the owner. He did not want to make any comments about the incident.

Limberlost finds new home

IT HAS BEEN FIVE YEARS since the business park took shape in Minden and it was with much fanfare that the first business there officially opened its doors.

The grand opening of the Limberlost facility drew a large group of well-wishers. The Friday evening event celebrated the opening of the first business in the park, with speeches and a tour of the facility.

Limberlost sales representative Cindy Cohanin welcomed the supporters and explained that "Limberlost manufactures a line of leisure furniture at the new facility in Minden out of B.C. western red cedar."

She thanked the artists and artisans from Haliburton County, including David Alexander Risk, who provided their work for the showroom. Risk was commissioned to produce a painting called "Lakeside Legacy," which showcases some of the furniture produced by Limberlost.

She also noted that the property features a nature trail and large boulders on which are copies of pictographs that have been collected from across Canada. She said other outdoors-related businesses are expected to locate on the property in the future. A bike trail is planned, which will link Minden with other areas of the county.

Minden Hills Reeve Ross Rigney said he was thrilled that the facility was finally opened. "It's a great pleasure, as the reeve of Minden Hills, to tell you how excited we are to have this facility located here in our business park," he said. "We need the business in Minden Hills and finally, we're going to get some tax money to help pay for what we've invested in this park."

Rigney commended Limberlost owner Richard Graesser and building owners Jim Ecclestone and Mike Johnson for setting such a high standard for the park. "We thought our by-law was going to be hard to deal with because it set such high standards, but we didn't have to worry about it when you people came here," Rigney said.

He noted the picnic area and walking trail behind the Limberlost building are something the community can enjoy. "It's unbelievable, you don't usually see this in a business park," he said. "Well, we've got it here."

MPP Chris Hodgson had planned to attend the opening ceremonies but other commitments prevented him from being there. Rigney read a statement on behalf of Hodgson. Addressing Richard Graesser, he said: "As your Member of Provincial Parliament, I am pleased to extend congratulations as you celebrate your grand opening at your new location. The quality of service provided to your customers over the years is a tribute to your hard work and dedication. I offer my kindest personal regards and best wishes for your continued success."

Rigney was presented with the first signed print of "Lakeside Legacy."

Graesser told the well-wishers there were several people to thank for helping to make the dream of a new facility in Minden a reality.

He started with Rigney. "When we were in a dire situation, about a year ago, he provided us with a facility so we could fulfil contracts." (Rigney arranged to lease the old Lutterworth garage as a temporary home for the Limberlost manufacturing facility until the new building was constructed. Problems with the former building near Eagle Lake forced Graesser to move his business to another location.)

Graesser went through a list of people whose contributions helped to make the dream come true.

"Most importantly though, I think the one that deserves the most credit here, from my standpoint, is my wife Carolynne," he said. "Without her continuous dedication, contribution and support, there honestly would be no Limberlost.

And I thank you for that."

The highlight of the Limberlost project for Reeve Rigney was "seeing it all come together."

He is pleased that his council has been able to help a business get established in Minden. "It meets my goal of opening up Minden Hills to small business," Rigney said.

He noted that this area generally "exports kids" because there are few jobs for young people. "With more businesses, we can create job opportunities and keep some of our young people in Minden," he said.

Rigney expects some positive spin-offs because of the Limberlost move to Minden's business park. He compared it to an anchor store in a shopping mall.

Later that evening, Graesser termed the opening ceremonies "absolutely fantastic."

He is pleased with the growth of his business. "Sales are so far ahead of last year they don't even compare," he said.

Graesser noted that more than 300 people had been into the showroom on the Victoria Day long weekend.

"There are some very serious buyers out there," he noted.

Some large lodges, like Windemere at Port Carling, Cleveland House in Muskoka and Deerhurst in Huntsville are using his furniture.

Limberlost representatives will attend the largest leisure show in North America this September in Chicago. From that show, Graesser expects to expand his markets in the United States.

The business employs a dozen people including Richard and Carolynne Graesser. He pointed out that Jim Ecclestone and Mike Johnson own the building. Graesser designed it to suit his purposes and the main contractor was Laverne Miscio.

"I have a five-year lease with the option for another five years," he said.

'I'm not angry'

Carnarvon Lumber had experienced financial problems for several years.

Bailey says the closing of the store could've happened six weeks ago, but it looked like the bank was going to see him through the upcoming boom season.

"After making it through a difficult winter I was really looking forward to a good summer," he said.

With at least 30 or 40 confirmed projects for the lumber company over the next few months, Bailey said it looked like it was going to be a banner year.

But instead of making plans to supply lumber for cottage renovations and other building projects, he had to make plans of a different sort.

On May 17 he told his employees to go home, he says, save and except a book keeper and a person to help answer phones.

"As they say in sports, you are only as good as your last game and our last game just wasn't good enough."

While he was trying to conceptualize the events of the week, a few local businesses were trying to put a deal together to save his company, but Bailey says there just wasn't enough time.

"Even if there was more time, I'm not sure it would've worked."

The last few weeks have been very difficult for Bailey and his entire family, but as the management of the company, he is ready to take full responsibility.

Watching the entire process unravel was hard enough, but having his hands tied made the store's closing that much more devastating, he says.

"I'm not angry," he says. "I want people to know that there aren't any sour grapes."

The lumber company was a business and had to be run as a business and be productive, he says.

"I feel we tried our best and had done everything in our power."

With deep-seeded roots in the community, dating back to 1945, Carnarvon Lumber also represented three generations of the Bailey family. Rick Bailey started at the company when he was 16.

The lumber industry is also part of the family core. (See sidebar.) In 1975 the family purchased Carnarvon Lumber. After going to business college, Rick Bailey worked full-time managing the company in 1978.

Years of experience and years of hard work did pay off, but in the end, Bailey says, the eventual downfall of the company wasn't a result of one isolated incident or decision, but more a result of difficult times over the years.

In the late 1980s the company was in good financial shape; however, after an economical downturn in the 1990s, his customer base and sales started to plummet. A few local businesses and contractors at that time had bankruptcies and they couldn't pay bills to the Carnarvon lumber company.

Bailey says the store didn't rebound as well as lumber stores in Haliburton and Minden.

"With interest costs rising, it was just hard for us to get our head above water," he says.

Looking back, Bailey's only regret was not having an opportunity to see the business through the summer season.

"Perhaps we tried for too long," he says wiping a few tears away from his right eye. "Maybe if I had sold the company five or six years ago..."

Right now Bailey isn't sure what the future holds.

His house is up for sale, in an effort to cut costs, but he is confident he will find a job.

Surrounded by supportive friends and loving family, Bailey says he will land on his feet again.

Bailey wants to thank all his employees for their dedication and work over the years, and he also wanted to thank the people in the community who supported him and his business.

"I feel at peace that I've done the best that I could and no man can do more than his best," he says.

Carnarvon Lumber roots run deep

W.O. Bailey started in the lumber business back in 1917

Here's a brief history of the Bailey family and Carnarvon Lumber:

- 1917: William Orrin (W.O.) Bailey forms a partnership with his two brothers-in-law, Whitney Martin and Garfield Martin, creating a company known as Bailey and Martin Lumber Co., operating three sawmills. Two of the sawmills are summer mills on Baptiste Lake and the other is a year-round mill on Lake St. Peter.

- 1926: W.O. Bailey sells out to Martin Bros. Lumber Co. and moves to Weston where he acquires some property and starts building houses.

- 1933: Curtis Way and W.O. Bailey forms a partnership to build a mill on Eagle Lake.

- W.O. Bailey created another mill on Redstone Lake. (The Eagle Lake mill was eventually dismantled and the Redstone Lake mill burnt to the ground in 1946).

- The Bailey and Way partnership dissolves in 1938.

- 1940: W.O. Bailey takes his son Merrill George (M.G.) Bailey into partnership and started the company called W.O. Bailey & Sons.

- 1945: The company moves to Haliburton and expands with equipment

The doors to Carnarvon Lumber were closed last week, bringing a long chapter in lumber history to a close.

and eventually branches out to purchase timber limits in Sherborne Township and build a small electric sawmill on Head Lake in Haliburton in 1951, near the present-day band shell in Head Lake Park.

Bailey also had a railway line built to the mill from the Haliburton station at his own expense.

- January 11, 1953: W.O. Bailey dies of cancer at his home; his sons Merrill, Cecil and Lorne run the business along with their staff.

- In the late 1950s the Baileys begin to phase out the planing mill/veneer mills aspects of their operation.

- 1959: The brothers sold the Bailey's Haliburton enterprise to their brother-in-law Bill Emmerson, who had married their sister Lois. This was the beginning of Emmerson Lumber.

- Merrill went to the University of Toronto, Cecil got into home-building/carpentry and Lorne assumed operation of the Bailey saw mill on Head Lake, which he ran until it burnt down in 1969.

- When Merrill Bailey finished university he returned to be a junior partner with Emmerson. During this time Emmerson lumber buys the lumber yard in Carnarvon from Ross Harrison, changing the name to Carnarvon Building Supplies Ltd. (The business had once been owned by Maurice Windsor and called Windsor Lumber.)

- 1975: Emmerson retained the Haliburton village enterprise and Merrill Bailey kept the one in Carnarvon.

- Merrill Bailey rolls the business over to his children, Johnston, Gary, Candice and Rick Bailey. Johnston and Candice sold their shares to Gary and Rick, who operate the store until 2002.

- 1986: Bill Emmerson passes away; son Kim now operates the business in Haliburton.

- 2002: Carnarvon Lumber and Building Supplies closes its doors. Emmerson Lumber is buying some of the stock.

Positive reaction

POLITICIANS ARE ALWAYS CRITICIZED when they make mistakes and seldom praised when their decisions turn out to be sound. Chalk one up for the Minden Hills councillors who supported a local business during a challenging time.

When Richard Graesser encountered difficulties with the facility he was using to manufacture a line of high quality wooden furniture and needed a place from which to work until a new building was constructed, Ross Rigney spearheaded the search for a temporary home for the Limberlost business.

Not everybody agreed with the quest to find temporary accommodations for the business. Some considered it a gamble.

But Rigney and his supporters saw it as an opportunity. Limberlost had orders to fill and desperately needed a place from which to manufacture its products. Few buildings within the municipality of Minden Hills were large enough to accommodate the business, but the old Lutterworth garage would fill the bill on a temporary basis.

A lease was arranged, equipment moved in and production resumed.

A year later, Limberlost moved into its new facility in Minden's business park. The building is far from one of those industrial boxes which are designed for utility, with no regard for style. The new Limberlost structure is a something in which the community can take pride. It is an attraction that will be noticed and admired by Highway 35 travellers. Some will be drawn to the business because of the appealing style of the building.

Many will be curious about the Limberlost building and some will no doubt want to see what is inside. Those who do take the time to explore won't be disappointed. Even if they don't buy some of the Limberlost furniture, the showroom's display of artwork and crafts produced by local artists and artisans is sure to tempt many to part with some cash.

Were Rigney and company gamblers when they extended a helping hand to a local business in a time of need? Maybe. Was there a high risk involved? No. Would Limberlost be a viable business employing a dozen people in Haliburton County if the effort hadn't been made find a temporary manufacturing location? Not likely.

The sale of the property on which the Limberlost facility is built marked the beginning of a trend. The deal on the final property in the park is expected to close soon. We can all take comfort in the fact someone had the foresight to see the potential and to react positively to the situation.

When green means yield

A letter from Melissa Pearce of Coboconk stresses the importance of motorists allowing volunteer firefighters the right of way as they answer the call to a fire, accident or other emergency situation. They have been issued green flashing lights so other drivers will be aware of the fact that they are responding to an emergency.

Vehicles bearing a green flashing light should be afforded the same right of way as police vehicles or fire trucks. Pulling over and allowing a vehicle with a green flashing light to pass safely is not a courtesy – it is a responsibility. The volunteer fire fighter you delay by not pulling over as quickly as safety permits may be responding to an emergency at your home or the home of a loved one, friend or neighbour.

Those who volunteer their time and sometimes risk their lives deserve our respect and co-operation. – j.g.

TO THE EDITOR

Times readers write

Angry about theft of elves

To the Editor:

My husband and I have always taken great pride in our house. We like to keep our gardens and lawns looking nice, but I'm not so sure about other folks in this town.

Over the last years we have experienced vandalism that started with out planters. Somebody walked away with two big planters plus flowers. We replaced these and screwed them down. The next time they took one planted and dumped the other onto the street. The third time they waited until the flowers were in full bloom and picked the big plants in the middle.

But May 13th took the cake. Someone entered our fenced off lawn and came right up to our front door and took two garden gnomes that were sitting on our front doorstep. These were gifts and it upset us greatly.

With the theft of these two elves we are beginning to wonder if it is really worth going to the time and money to keep the house looking nice, so that someone else can trash it.

Kathy Roberts,
Minden.

P.S. We would really appreciate the return of our gnomes.

Yield to the flashing green light

To the Editor:

Anyone remember the green light campaign? Well, it's time to check your memory!

My father is a volunteer firefighter. Something he and my mother have noticed is that many people just do not realize what the green flashing light really means. It's rather frustrating for my father when he's attempting to get to the scene of a fire and no one will pull over for him. Everyone knows that red is for ambulance, police and full-time fire vehicles, blue for funeral processions and orange for other emergency workers. Now, here's another one for you drivers to remember. Volunteer firefighters can always be recognized while on their way to an emergency, by the GREEN FLASHING LIGHT in their windshield.

Every volunteer firefighter would really appreciate it if you, the readers and travellers in cottage country, would remember this and treat vehicles bearing these lights like you would an ambulance or police car. Just remember, that the next fire they respond to could involve your cottage, home, or family. Wouldn't you want them to get there as quickly as possible?

Occupational hazards

EVERY PROFESSION has its occupational hazards. Tennis pros suffer from elbow injuries, baseball pitchers agonize over worn out rotor cuffs and bowlers must wear those gawdawful shoes. But very few people understand the subtle risks associated with journalism.

Believe me, outside of proctology, there are few jobs where a simple slip up can cause such a mess. Every writer knows that a sloppy phrase could get you sued and a simple misspelled word could change the entire meaning of your message. It's nerve-wracking.

Don't believe me?

Okay, let's say I was writing a story on the emigration of educated Canadians to the United States – something we all know as the brain-drain.

The pressure is on, my deadline is rapidly approaching, and I'm all wound up on coffee. I forget to type one simple letter and the headline now reads: Canadians suffering from bran drain. Neither my spell check nor other editorial staff notes the mistake because they too are going through similar pressures.

So we publish the story with the botched up headline. The first couple of paragraphs read innocently enough:

Canadian's suffering from bran drain by Steve Galea

It's a problem that's plaguing the nation and one that Minister of Health Allan Rock would like to see addressed: "What is it that makes all our doctors want to go so badly?" he asked to an assembled crowd of flax farmers in North Battleford, Saskatchewan. He is referring, of course, to the steady flow south of the border, an ongoing national nightmare that his government and others have tried to plug up time and time again. Critics liken him to the heroic little Dutch Boy, about to be washed away when the dam bursts.

BEYOND 35

Steve Galea

Yet the Minister smiles, "I'm optimistic that we're going to put a stop to this movement, but even in the worst case, we ought to slow it up to a mere trickle."

Right now the situation is too fluid. Were looking for some consistency here, for the good of the nation."

And so it goes...

Now, after a headline and lead like that, only those with the strongest stomach would read on. After all now the story certainly doesn't conjure up pretty pictures.

Yet, the subconscious works in strange ways.

Before you know it, the fellow who read up till that point decides to forego that bran muffin during afternoon break so he doesn't have to needlessly suffer like all his fellow countrymen. He also mentions this to his friend in passing. He too, decides to opt for the liquorice snack.

Word gets around the office and suddenly eating habits change; people are touting the merits of a low fibre diet. Now, everyone is consuming eggs at breakfast, chocolate by the pound, and going out for cheese fondue at lunch. They've been forewarned and now they're determined that bran drain won't get them.

At work, only the boss and cleaner are happy. Productivity has gone up since washroom breaks have declined. But three or four days later, everyone is on edge. People are snarling over paper-clips. Finally, someone rereads the full story and catches the typo. Just after coffee break there's a mad rush to the employee washroom where things finally work themselves out.

But, despite my best efforts, my journalistic integrity has gone down the toilet too. No one will ever trust another thing I write. I guess what I'm trying to say is that in journalism it's important to remember that it's all fun and games until someone loses an i.

Canada: Garden of babble-on

ONE THING WE ALL KNOW for sure about Canada – it's a bilingual nation, right? Two languages – French and English – spoken here.

Open your ears, folks. Canada's not a bilingual nation – it's a polyglot, Tower of Babel nation. Take a stroll through Vegreville, Alberta and what are you likely to hear? Ukrainian. Order a coffee in the Hoito restaurant in Thunder Bay and what is the waitress speaking? Finnish. Stroll down the main street of Banff and chances are 50-50 the conversation you hear will be in Japanese.

You can get by speaking Italian in Toronto, Mandarin in Vancouver, Icelandic in Gimli and Gaelic in Cape Breton.

Then there's slang and dialects. Joul in Quebec, Michif among many Metis on the prairies.

And that's not even getting to the languages that were here before the big boats with the white sails came.

Did you know there are over 50 aboriginal languages still spoken in Canada? There's Anishinabe, Inuktitut, Kwakwaka, Maliseet, Mi'kmaq, Mohawk, Siksika and Slave to name a handful. The language names might not be familiar, but I guarantee you already know some words in them.

Saskatchewan, Ontario, Manitoba, Nanaimo, Winnipeg, Ottawa. See? You speak like a pro.

Canada is so rich in languages we've all but lost one without even noticing. A hundred years ago it was the lingua franca of all encounters between West Coast natives and European traders and explorers. It is known as the Chinook jargon.

Not a language really – a few hundred words at most. A little French, a little English and a lot of native words all stirred together. We still have a few nuggets of Chinook jargon in English: the word 'hooch' for home-made liquor comes from 'hoochanoo' and 'snoose' for chewing tobacco is a corruption of 'chinois', the native word for tobacco. We can thank Chinook jargon for the word 'potlatch' meaning a feast; and for the word muckamuck. We speak of 'high muckamucks' when referring to moguls and tycoons like Conrad

Black and Donald Trump. In Chinook jargon, 'hyas muckamuck' was a person important enough to eat at the main table with the chief.

Someone once remarked on the unusually large number of pet dogs on the west coast named 'Chako'. Actually, it's not a name. It's Chinook jargon for 'come here'.

And people of all races who live on the West Coast still use the term 'skookum' widely. It's a word with a lot of meanings. It can be 'good', 'powerful',

'delicious' or 'tough' or just 'big'.

There's a set of powerful rapids in British Columbia called Skookumchuck. That's pure Chinook: skookum means 'strong' and chuck means 'ocean'.

But nobody on the Pacific coast seems to have much use for a trading language any more. Aside from a few linguistic fossils, Chinook jargon is as dead as Etruscan or Phoenician.

A pity. We lose some words that would be useful in any language. Such as 'klahhanie', which means 'outside'. It's tricky, though. If you are 'klahhanie', you are in the great outdoors. But if you 'go klahhanie', you're on your way to the biffy.

Then there's 'tillicum' (or 'tilikum'). This refers to kin, or people. Tillicum can be your friends, your family or your social group. It was commonly used to refer to your ally or buddy.

My favourite morsel of lost Chinook jargon? Klahowya. It was the standard thing to say when meeting someone or leaving them – like 'aloha' in Hawaiian. It sounds like a corruption of the English expression 'How are you', but linguists believe it derives from a word in the Chinook language 'klahauia'.

Whatever. To my ear it sounds cheery and salubrious and disarmingly friendly. I can visualize an early explorer – a Fraser or a Vancouver – nervously approaching a group of Salish people and waiting for the magic word.

So. Klahowya, tillicum?

Minden people come through again

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank some very wonderful people who made the food bank yard sale a huge success.

First and foremost I would like to thank The Times Publisher Len Pizzey for taking the time to talk with me and allowing a story to go into his paper, and Reporter Allison Taylor for taking pictures and doing the story. Without your co-operation we would never have gotten the message out to so many people about the need for donations.

Of course, a big heartfelt thank you to everyone who donated items for the yard sale. Without you we would never have been as successful. Your generosity was overwhelming. You sure know how to come together for a good cause.

Bruce at Mr. D's Donuts, thank you so much for donating donuts to the ladies, it helped to keep us going on a long and cold day.

To all the people who turned out for the yard sale, thank-you – your donations again were outstanding and your generosity was heartwarming.

And of course to Carolyn and Sarah Christian and Irma Walker, I can't thank you enough for your enthusiasm, energy and tireless efforts.

Without you, we would never had gotten this event off the ground. Ladies, you are awesome.

Everyone mentioned in this letter played a huge part in making this yard sale such a huge success. It was our first attempt in this nature and I couldn't have asked for a better response.

You all make me so proud to live in this town and thanks to all your efforts, we have more to give to the families who need it.

A huge thank-you to all and God Bless each and everyone of you.

Lindsay MacLean,
Minden.

Images of Korea

IMAGINE A PLACE WHERE THE MOUNTAINS STRETCH TO THE SKY, surrounded by cultivated land on each side, nary a lawn or open field in sight, and the sun hangs high beaming a welcoming warmth. Imagine a place where the traffic runs like the water and the people stream from building to building and apartment buildings rise from the cityscape like plants reaching for the sun. Imagine a place so small that an hour from any city breathtaking landscapes await the human eye. Imagine a place where chimes of cellular phones resonate from the hands of young and old in rural and urban areas. There is such a place. It lies several thousands miles over the oceans, regardless which direction you fly. Korea is a land divided into North and South by an ideology and a guarded border, but is united in language, and historical culture. Despite the threat of war it is a land whose people welcome and warm the soul.

Rotary Group Study Exchange Member Darren Lum with Minden resident, GSE member Kate Hall, Team Leader Brian Menton also from Haliburton, and two other team members spent a month in Korea touring the north-eastern area of South Korea and visited six cities (Wonju, Kangnung, Chuncheon, Samchok, Donghae, and Seoul) from April 5 - May 5.

Downtown: Chuncheon city in the afternoon. A small city in central Korea with a population of close to 300,000. The majority of the population is young and the main industry is technology.

A common sight: Along the roads that run beside the East Sea there are kilometres of fencing topped with barbed-wire and two-men patrols walk the perimeter fencing checking for breaks in the fence.

What do I need?: A Korean shopper checks the goods at the traditional food market in Donghae city located on the East Sea across from Japan.

Telling rocks: One rock, among thousands, sits in a fence. If disturbed, a two-man South Korean Army patrol will sound an alarm to investigate if it is a North Korean military incursion.

Korea's beauty up-close. A sea of red flowers was in full bloom in Wonju, a city of 300,000 people.

Lowest of the low go even lower

by MARTHA PERKINS
Times Staff

County councillors, who are already amongst the lowest-paid politicians in the province, are about to take home even less money for their efforts.

On Wednesday, they modified their pay structure to make sure their pay was decreased.

The issue arose when preliminary payment figures indicated the county would spend $3,200 more than the $18,000 the county had budgeted for the politicians' salaries. Rather than budget more money, councillors decided to trim their pay even more.

This is despite that fact that a recent survey indicated that Haliburton County ranks third from the bottom in how much remuneration it gives its politicians.

The new by-law says that the warden will be paid $15,000 a year and each councillor $4,800. Councillors then get paid for the number of meetings they attend and mileage.

Previously, they'd get $100 for a day meeting and $50 for a night meeting, regardless of the meeting's length. This was to recognize that for those councillors who work, they'd have to take time off work to attend a day meeting.

But sometimes a day meeting can last only an hour and a night meeting three or four.

The new pay schedule says that councillors will be paid $50 for every meeting less than three hours and $100 for every meeting that goes beyond three hours.

As well, they will no longer be able to charge $50 a day for attending conferences on the county's behalf. (They had the opportunity to do this in the past but many of them did not submit invoices for the money.)

Dysart et al Deputy-reeve Bill Davis said he was against such a payment because councillors volunteer to go to conferences. The county is already paying for accommodation, food and mileage.

The mileage rate is $0.35 a kilometre.

Leave smoking bylaws to the county: Reeve

by ALLISON TAYLOR
Times staff

Forcing smokers to butt out in public is not a battle Algonquin Highlands is ready to pursue – at least not yet.

Council was sent a letter from the Town of Halton Hills, requesting support to ask the province to legislate public smoking. Halton Hills wanted all municipalities in Ontario to have the same legislation to avoid situations where one municipality had an advantage over another.

Right now municipalities establish jurisdictions to prohibit smoking in public places. While there may be a few restaurants, bars and public places that don't allow smoking in the Haliburton Highlands, the majority of entertainment establishments do permit people to light up.

"Cigarettes are legal and they should be allowed to be used legally"

TOM GARDNER

Reeve Eleanor Harrison, who is also the Warden for Haliburton County, said the county was not dealing with the smoking by-law right now, but if the issue does appear again in the Highlands it shouldn't be up to the four local townships to make the decisions.

"I personally think that if Haliburton is going to do something about it then it should be a county responsibility to avoid discrepancies across the Highlands," she said.

County-wide bans on smoking in public places, or not, Councillor Tom Gardner was vocally against legislation that tells people where they can and cannot light up.

"I hate it when the government gets involved and tells people what they can and can't do," said Gardner, whose wife owns a restaurant in Minden. "Cigarettes are legal and they should be allowed to be used legally. I feel strongly about that."

Gardner said if there was a huge need for non-smoking restaurants and bars then private enterprises would step up to the plate and provide those services. "Obviously there's not," he said.

While the issue hasn't been pursued locally, Harrison said "it's out there and there's going to be a push on."

The Seventh Annual Tim Heming Golf Tournament & BBQ raised nearly $2,000 through donations and pledges held at the Beaverbrook Golf Course on Thursday, May 23. Nineteen golfers played a round of nine and another 15 came to the BBQ held at the Sunny Rock Bed & Breakfast. This event helps contribute to The Tim Heming Bursary Fund to honour the memory of Tim by helping children with disabilities receive specialized supervision to attend camp, provides funds for awards of achievement in Minden and Huntsville, assists families in gaining support and the knowledge to understand a child's disability, and with the purchase of required educational equipment. Since starting in 1996 it has raised $7,500.

911 project needs volunteers

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

Volunteers are needed for the latest stage in the 911 project for Haliburton County.

During a public meeting held on Saturday at the county offices in Minden, Steve Foster, 911 coordinator, explained to people the county needs road representatives. Individuals to take it upon themselves to collect information about the residents on their road.

In a February meeting, it came to county councillors attention that slow progress was being made for data collection and they would not at the present rate meet the July 2004 start date for 911.

Foster says road representatives on average will have no more than 17 houses per road or as few as three. A road has to have a minimum of three habitable dwellings on it to count as a road.

The information needed is driveway characteristics, local names for the access road, property owner's name and telephone number and distinguishing features of the buildings or properties.

The volunteers are also being asked to record any non-building features on the road where the public might gather such as a park or a public beach. These areas will also be assigned numbers.

Volunteers and property owners are also asked to provide a preferred drive path, or best way for a vehicle to get to the property quickly and safely.

There are 1800 roads in the county and approximately 30,000 properties — it's a daunting task to collect information about all of them, says Foster.

So far the county only has 12 per cent of the information gathering process completed. Foster says Hydro One and Statistics Canada Census have refused to help with information because of rights legislated in the privacy to information act.

The information provided will be entered into a database and tied to the phone number for that dwelling (when there is a phone there) so that when a call is made from that house to 911, all that information will appear instantly before the operator. How the system works for islands, is the boat landing from access point will be used for the address markers for emergency services. Foster compared to a cluster of cottages on an island to being a horizontal apartment building, where each apartment has a separate address as each cottage will.

Crews are currently out using equipment to map where properties are on what roads and assigning new 911 civic addresses. If a group of cottagers have a locked gate on their private road, they must arrange with Foster to allow the crews on to the road or else they will not be assigned an address.

On roads that are not in drivable shape, the 911 addressing crews will go as far as they can and then assign numbers at that spot for buildings beyond that point.

Addresses need to be assigned this year for the project to meet its deadline.

Anyone wishing more information or wanting to volunteer to represent their road should call the 911 county office at 705 286-2306.

Trillium funding formula flawed, small rural communities short-changed

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

Minden Hills council believes the funding formula for Trillium Foundation grants is flawed. Foundation officials were invited to Thursday's council meeting to address council's concerns.

Joanne Richmond, Program Manager for the Durham, Haliburton, Kawartha Lakes, Pine Ridge District of the Trillium Foundation and Grant Review Team member Jeanne Anthon attended the Minden Hills council meeting. Richmond explained how Trillium Foundation funding is administered, provided an overview of the program and answered some questions.

Council had asked for some clarification in response to a request for support of a resolution from the City of Woodstock. In the resolution, Woodstock council asked that Foundation grant money be allocated to municipalities for distribution based on permanent population figures.

Minden Hills Reeve Ross Rigney had serious concerns about the Woodstock resolution. He said the proposal would penalize smaller rural communities like those in Haliburton County because permanent population figures are used in the funding formula. "We have a large seasonal population and we are expected to provide services for them as well," he said. "Small rural communities don't have the resources to build facilities (which would qualify for Trillium Foundation funding)."

Regarding concerns that were raised about the per capita permanent resident population being used as a base for funding, she said that it was the provincial government that set up the guidelines. She noted that funds are not allocated on a municipality-by-municipality basis.

A grant review team is established for each region.

Applications for this region are submitted to Richmond, who assembles the information and presents it to the local grant review team, which is comprised of volunteers. The local review committee reviews the applications and makes recommendations to the Board of Directors regarding which applications to fund and the amount of funding that should be provided. The board makes the final decision.

Richmond pointed out that some of the grants that have been issued will have an impact across the county, not only within the municipality of the recipients. The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association, the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association and the Trails and Tours Network as examples.

Some funding is still available to incorporated non-profit organizations as well as registered charities. Richmond said that if there are any other groups that fit within the guidelines, they should contact her for more information. Contact information is available from the Minden Hills municipal office. Information is also available at the Trillium Foundation web site, which is: www.trilliumfoundation.org.

Local organizations which have received funding within the past few weeks include the Minden Curling Club ($24,600); Haliburton Highlands Trails and Tours Network ($12,000); and the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary, Branch 636, Minden ($15,700).

"I thought the meeting went well," Richmond said. "I think they (members of council) got the feedback they were looking for."

Minden Hills council directed staff to draft a letter to MPP Chris Hodgson expressing the concern that the municipality is penalized because it is a small, mostly rural community with a large seasonal population. Given the guidelines, the funding allocation is minimal.

The Minister of Tourism, Culture and Recreation will also be contacted with notification that Minden Hills does not support the Woodstock resolution and explaining why.

Caregiver of the Year award nominations sought

Allianz Canada is inviting nominations for this year's Caregiver of the Year Awards, an annual program that began in 1998 to honour the kindness and hard work provided by non-professional caregivers.

People from across Canada are asked to nominate a non-professional caregiver they consider exceptional for the $10,000 National Award and four $1,000 Regional Awards.

Nominations are to include a testimonial of 500 words or less, describing the circumstances both of the caregiver and the care recipient. Nominations will be accepted from May 1, 2002 to August 31, 2002. An independent committee will judge the nominations in September. Recipients of the Awards will be announced in November 2002. Nomination criteria and requirements for award entitlement can be obtained from Allianz Canada, Awards Program, 10 York Mills Road, Suite 700, Toronto, Ontario M2P 2G5 or the Allianz Canada web site at www.allianz.ca.

County searching for waste solutions

by MARTHA PERKINS
Times Staff

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Wednesday's county council meeting.

County councillors are planning to take a tour of an operating Eco-waste Solutions site to see if the company is offering a viable solution to the county's waste management problems.

Eco-Waste Solutions takes all kinds of trash and burns and cleans it at very high temperatures, taking care of 90% of the volume. Through its internal "scrubbers", it releases a very small percentage of allowable "atmospheric output" (gases and pollutants.) It is approved by Environment Canada and the Ontario Ministry of Environment. Oxidizers are currently in use throughout the United States and Canada.

Dysart et al is applying for funding to buy an Eco-waste oxidizer for Haliburton. It would cost $2.2-million two unit's to handle the municipality's waste. If the county were to consider taking on the project, it would need to triple or quadruple that expenditure.

The units are not labour-intensive and it's hoped that one day they'll be self-sustaining - creating enough energy through the burning process to produce the energy needed to run the unit. Until then, it costs $45 a day in propane to fuel an operating unit.

Company spokesman George Wilson said that an oxidizer is expected to be used in conjunction with recycling programs, not as a way to get rid of all waste.

Dysart reeve Murray Fearrey said the oxidizer could also be used to deal with sludge. In the next few years, the MOE will no longer allow septic sludge to be spread on fields.

County councillors hope to tour an oxidizer site in the fall.

Meanwhile, Warden Eleanor Harrison reported on a tour of a septic sludge pit in Muskoka. She and fellow Algonquin Highlands councillors were pleasantly surprised by how well run it is. There's also very little environmental impact.

She says the public needs to be informed about how benign these new sites are.

9-1-1 update

Hydro One's lawyers have turned down a request to have 9-1-1 staff accompany meter readers as a way of pooling resources and knowledge. It would also reduce the cost of addressing all properties in the Highlands.

When Hydro One responded with a firm "no," Warden Eleanor Harrison said "there's no use questioning it; we'll have to find other alternatives."

Meanwhile, the 9-1-1 crews have been making steady progress. They've already logged the Hwy. 35 corridor within the county's borders, discovering there are 735 address points along the way. They are now working on county roads.

"We're slowly making our way towards the lakefront," reported co-ordinator Stephen Foster.

The list of all duplicate and troublesome road names is about to be distributed to municipalities. Foster said the department wanted to make sure the list was complete in order to give municipalities equal opportunity to come up with new names.

The county has decided that roads with similar-sounding names, such as Alexander and Alexandra, will no longer be allowed. Harrison said this was a wise decision. In Muskoka, where they did allow similar-sounding names, problems arose when emergency personnel were dispatched. It's now costing Muskoka a lot of money to correct the situation.

"[Road naming] needs to be done very thoroughly now," she said, rather than after 9-1-1 is introduced.

Foster said he's getting a lot of co-operation from lake associations which have volunteers ready and eager to help.

HCSA problems

Harrison cautioned against blaming the landowners for the problems being faced by the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association.

New provincial legislation does not allow the HCSA to continue to give landowners free snowmobile passes in exchange for permission to have trails cross their land.

In a recent report in The Haliburton County Echo, the HCSA said some landowners were holding it for ransom, threatening to withhold access unless there was some form of compensation.

"Don't blame the property owners who have been co-operative," Harrison said. "We don't want to alienate them."

Fearrey said the province should be helping snowmobile clubs deal with the problem.

EMS has quiet weekend despite extra traffic

For the first holiday weekend of the summer, Haliburton County EMS responded to 43 calls from 6:00 p.m. Friday until 8:00 a.m. Monday. Fifteen of the 43 calls were emergencies and of the 15 calls, six were motor vehicle collisions.

Even though the weather was unseasonably cool, there was a large number of visitors to the County on the weekend that kept our roads and business areas quite busy. Of the six motor vehicle collisions, none resulted in patients receiving any major injuries.

"This is attributed to the enhanced police presence on our highways and stepped-up enforcement of traffic regulations", says EMS manager Bob English. Also, the ever-increasing use of seat belts and vehicle-equipped air bags has proven to reduce injuries to accident victims."

No calls were responded to on the weekend involving mishaps on the water.

Crowning Beatrice

With all the pomp and circumstance suitable for a Queen, Beatrice Britain celebrated her 100th birthday last week at Hyland Crest in Minden. She was crowned with a special tiara and donned a new gown for the day.

Two world wars, horse-drawn carriages, humans on the moon and soaring technological innovation - Beatrice Britain has seen it all.

Last week the Hyland Crest resident, known as Bea to her friends and family, added another element to her list of profound historical experiences by celebrating her 100th birthday.

"I feel good," she whispered from her wheelchair, prominently positioned at the helm of the dining room on the lower level of the seniors' residence.

But it wasn't the five brightly-coloured birthday balloons affixed to her wheelchair, or the heart-warming crowd of family and friends that made the occasion memorable; it was Beatrice's majestic smile that simply stole the day.

"Thank you" were the words she mouthed over and over again to people in the room as they wished her a happy birthday.

Dressed in a brand-new salmon-coloured dress, with a silver tiara and a fresh flower corsage to add a final touch to her ensemble, Beatrice radiated a life of memories and experiences.

"She is the most loving and caring person," said her son Ken Britain, holding his mother's hand and sitting beside her for the duration of the party last week. "She looks beautiful."

As her only son, Ken and his wife, Isabelle Britain, stepped up to the task of organizing the celebration of his mother's milestone birthday.

"For years my mother did everything for me and the whole family," Ken said. "This is my mother and she deserves as much as I can give her."

Describing his mother as a family-oriented housewife, Ken says Beatrice came from old-English stock; the family always came first.

Born in Birmingham, Britain in 1902, Beatrice moved to Canada, specifically Montreal, in 1912 with her parents. She was the second oldest of six siblings, with two younger brothers still living today in California.

After her husband Frank died, her son initially moved her to Toronto in 1988 and then eventually brought her to Minden in 1991 so she could be close to his home on South Water Street.

"I never expected her to live this long, and I really don't know why she has. I suspect part of it is the good care she gets at [Hyland Crest]," he said.

With bright eyes, tapping fingers and dancing toes, the birthday girl wasn't shy about joining a sing-a-long, held to honour her love of singing.

She remembered the words to old favourites such as, "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles", "Oh My Darling Clementine" and Bea's personal favourite, "Where did you get that hat?"

As director of Hyland Crest, Linda Robinson has known Bea since she first arrived in Minden and can remember her singing that song.

"Anytime you'd put a hat on her head she would start singing the song," Robinson said, beaming after Bea starting singing it by herself during the party. "She sang the song for months."

Greetings were sent from Queen Elizabeth, Prime Minister Jean Chretien, the Governor-General of Canada, Adrienne Clarkson and endless other politicians and public figures.

"Bea is fit to be a Queen today," said one member of the audience.

"I hope all of us can look this good at 100."

Beatrice Britain gets a helping hand from her son (right) Ken Britain when she cuts her 100th birthday cake last week. Ken and his wife Isabelle organized the party held at Hyland Crest.

Stepping into the future in Stanhope

STANHOPE LIFE

Pat McNinch

The times they are a-changin' as local businesses come under new ownership and offer new services. Stanhope has always been the sort of place where everybody knows your name, but these days it's getting harder to tell the players without a program. Let's give our new entrepreneurs all the help and encouragement we can as they step up to bat, and Stanhope steps into the future.

The Oakview Lodge & Marina at Little Hawk Lake has recently been purchased by a young couple from Peterborough. The lodge is situated in a lovely setting on the lake, with plenty of boat storage and a general store.

Krenar and Valerie Kulla are the eager new hosts, who bring with them a wealth of knowledge of the business. Quality service is the key to providing comfort and convenience to their guests.

Krenar came to Canada six years ago from Albania when that country was in so much turmoil. He has been a chef for the past five years and still owns Starlight Dining Lounge in Peterborough. Krenar met his wife, Valerie, in Peterborough and they have one son.

The couple is very excited about the addition of a dining facility at the Oakview Lodge, which opened May 17.

The menu offers, "healthy food and fine dining," says Krenar, "and will include seafood, steak, chicken, pasta and fresh salads." The dining room is open to the public and will soon be fully licenced.

The previous owners, Roger and Sharon Hewson are retiring to Bobcaygeon, but have been enormously helpful in getting the new owners off on the right foot.

Krenar looks forward to welcoming back previous guests of Oakview, and the new guests who will soon follow. The Kullas are delighted to be in the Highlands and want everyone to know how grateful they are for the support they have already received from the community.

Ted hails from Oakville where he had his own company, Lexsys, a telecom distributor for Nortel. He has designed and installed large digital communications systems for hospitals and various government agencies. Ted still maintains an interest in the telecommunications business, but the recent misfortunes of Nortel, prompted him to look in other directions.

A long-time cottager on Balsam Lake near Coboconk, Ted decided to combine his business and engineering background with his love of boating and the outdoor life. He has redesigned the office and showroom of Kushog Marine and will be handling sales and service of boats, kayaks, canoes and paddle boats, as well as ATVs and snowmobiles.

Steve Howard is 'on board' as a certified service technician to handle repairs, maintenance and storage.

Ted firmly believes in the same philosophy as one of his suppliers, Polaris; 'keep the customer happy'. As a businessman he knows the importance of building a company based on honesty and integrity and says that Kushog Marine, "will always provide professional sales and ser-

Triumphant trio

Haliburton Highland's Secondary School badminton coach Jason Morissette, left, beams with pride for the Mixed Doubles team of Andrew Mansfield and Cheryl Ripley. They earned a bronze medal at OFFSA. The duo competed against 40 other teams at the four-day tournament held from May 8-11 at Cambrian College in Sudbury. The top three finish has only been accomplished once before in the school's history, nearly 20 years ago.

Annual grading highlights end of season

Five Kinmount Peaceful Storm Martial Arts Club students earn black belts

by HOLLY LOUGHEED
Special to The Times

Family and friends of the students of the Kinmount Peaceful storm Martial Arts Club gathered at the Galway Fire Hall dojo recently to watch the club's annual grading.

A total of 22 martial artists were graded, with the following results:

Kaitlyn McLaughlin, yellow belt; Shelby Parfitt, yellow belt; Dietra Parfitt, yellow belt with orange stripe; K.C. Nicholson, orange belt; Myles Ellis, orange belt; Theresa Jones, orange belt; Brahm Thurston, orange belt; David Ferguson, orange belt; Lauren Miles, orange belt; Lisa Clark, green belt; Shawna Miles, green belt; Steve Nicholson, blue belt; Kevin Stam, blue belt; Katelyn Stam, blue belt; Mark Majchrowski, blue belt; Kate MacKay, brown belt; Evan Knowles, brown belt; David Lougheed, Jr. black belt; Jamie Hobson, Jr. black belt; Andrew MacNab, Jr. black belt; Erin Hobson, Sr. black belt; Mike Barrington, Sr. black belt.

In attendance to assist Renshi Dave Lougheed and Sensei Chris Moore with the procedures, formalities and judging of the students were Kyoshi Steve Raszewski from Milton, Renshi Chris Brooks from Campbellford and Sensei Vaughan Richardson from Coboconk.

Kyoshi Raszewski made a special presentation to Renshi Dave Lougheed, promoting him from Sensei to Renshi for his 11 years of knowledge and dedication given to the club, which was founded by Renshi Lougheed in 1991.

Oakville woman aces 7th at Blairhampton Golf Course

The Blairhampton Golf Course recorded its first hole-in-one on the Saturday of the Victoria Day long weekend.

Kelly Hawkins of Oakville aced the 114-yard seventh hole from the red tee using a wedge.

The golfer's dream was witnessed by her husband Steve.

A presentation was also made to Renshi Brooks, promoting him from Sensei to Renshi for his years of contributions to the club. Renshi Brooks was the first black belt to come from the Kinmount club back in 1995.

Sensei Chris Moore was honoured with the presentation of his Second Degree in Hapkido by Kyoshi Raszewski.

Sensei Moore has also made his way up through the ranks from white belt to black, starting in the club in 1992. He will now be taking over the Kinmount Peaceful Storm Martial Arts Club when it resumes in September. Renshi Dave Lougheed has decided to take a break, or retire, from teaching the arts after 11 years to pursue other interests.

Along with the assistance of the five newly graded black belts, Sensei Moore is hoping the club will continue to be successful and the traditions will carry on.

On behalf of the Kinmount Martial Arts Club, Renshi Lougheed would like to thank the Galway Firefighters' Association for the continued use of the hall as a dojo and to "Slice of the North" for the great pizza lunch that was very much enjoyed by all who attended the grading. He would also like to express his gratitude to all the students and parents who, over the years, have supported the club in so many ways and have accelerated to such heights themselves. Renshi Lougheed hopes the students and parents will continue to show such great support and respect to Sensei Moore as he continues on with Peaceful Storm Martial Arts.

and effort to various community events.

Admittedly not a lover, or even a liker of shopping for herself, Gina becomes a regular shopaholic when it comes to stocking the store. She loves to keep Pine Reflections ever-changing with new and different items for home and garden.

Dorothy Rickford of Paris, Ontario, has recently introduced a new line of children's clothing to Pine Reflections under the name of 'Dorothy's Children's Nook.' The outfits are for children from 0 to 6 years and bear labels such as Winnie The Pooh, Dr. Denton and Oshkosh. Gina says, "The Children's Nook is the only children's wear available in the area and it has been very successful. Dorothy's line is a departure for the store," she says, "but, I felt there was a real need here. Customers have already told us how happy they are that they don't have to travel to so far to find these items any more."

Pine Reflections is located on Highway 35, just north of Highway 118, beside the Carnarvon Garage.

STANHOPIANS: Please mark your calendars with the following changes in the Stanhope Heritage Museum's popular series, "An Evening With...":

"How Does Your Garden Grow," featuring U of T professor and heritage garden-er, Laurel McDowell, previously scheduled for Tuesday, June 11, has been rescheduled tentatively for June 18.

The venue for this one will be changed to a location closer to the Stanhope Museum so that we will be able to view the Museum's new heritage garden as part of Professor McDowell's presentation. An announcement will appear here next week when arrangements have been confirmed.

Owner of Pine Reflections, Gina Atkinson, is getting ready for a summer spree at this boutique based in Carnarvon. Her husband Nigel is also a big Stanhopean, working for the volunteer fire department.

Carelessness starts fire

by SHERYL LOUCKS
Times staff

Willy and Diana Barbour were inside their Moore Falls home after being out all Thursday morning doing yard work when someone came to the door to warn them of flames beside their property.

Just off to the side of their yard is the Moore Falls dam and a small patch of woods that had burst into flames.

The Norland fire department quickly responded to put out the blaze. The couple say someone crossing the bridge noticed the fire that started at the bottom of an embankment below the Barbours' driveway.

"It's amazing how fast the flames erupted; we had just been outside," says Willy.

They were told by firefighters it was likely a cigarette that started the blaze and someone was seen leaving the area as the fire trucks pulled in.

"It was someone fishing off the dam, without a doubt," says Willie.

Neither he nor his wife smoke.

The Barbours say a lot of garbage is often left behind fishermen or picnickers so they were not surprised a fire had been started.

"We've even had people park in our driveway and go down to fish off our dock," says Diana.

The Barbours would like to see access to the dam restricted to the public, particularly after the fire.

Mac Ellis, Haliburton area superintendent for Trent-Severn Waterway, says they do own the dam structure but not the land on either side of it. He concurred there is often garbage there and people.

"It would be nice to do something about it but we've found in our experience people will say 'I've been fishing here for 50 years I'm not going to stop now.' They'll trample down fences and signs are useless. It's almost impossible to restrict access around a dam," says Ellis.

The Stoney Lake Dinner Cruise on July 11, a fund-raising event for the Haliburton County Home Support Services, offers a great package. In addition to the dinner cruise, return transportation is provided, along with a visit to the Whetung Ojibway Craft and art gallery, your admission fee to the Canadian Canoe Museum and all taxes/gratuities. For ticket information or reservations, call Roxanne early at 705-457-2941 to avoid disappointment.

Mark your calendars now for an evening of dancing to live music in support of Kinmount Minor Ball at the Galway Community Centre on June 29. Tickets are $5 and can be purchased at the Kinmount Independent Grocery store or at the door.

With its personalized customer service approach, the Mariposa Community Credit Union is an asset to our Kinmount residents and visitors. I was saddened to learn this week that Axel, who always kept a watchful eye over proceedings from his vantage point, stretched out full length on the floor, has died. Staff always said that they knew in time of danger this gentle giant of a dog would rise from his pretend sleep state, leap over the counter, and deal decisively with any intruder. They were absolutely right.

May 31, June 1 & 2, 2002
In the Haliburton Curling Club

New hours more convenient for visitors including outdoor lawn ornaments, crafts and games.

The arena is full, with over 80 exhibitors displaying their products and services. If you're looking for help or a specific product, you're very likely to find it at the home show.

Show hours have been slightly changed this year. The arena and curling club will close earlier on Saturday and open earlier Sunday.

The NEW hours are as follows:

- Friday, May 31, 4 p.m. - 9 p.m.
- Saturday, June 1, 10 a.m. - 7 p.m.
- Sunday, June 2, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Last year's show was the most successful ever, attended by more than 3,000 people. This year's show should be even better. It's an excellent place to meet the experts, find new products, get information to help you make an informed choice about major purchases, and meet your neighbours in a friendly atmosphere.

For show information call Wayne Hussey, (705) 457-2892.

Visitors to last year's show talk to Wayne deJong, left, of Newbatts Appliances in Haliburton

Proud of the ongoing partnership with the Haliburton High School construction class. Last year the students created a Garden Shed which we raffled off at the show. This year's projects include a fish hut in the first semester and a dog house this semester. The hut was raffled off in January and was won by Dennis McKee of Haliburton. The dog house will be raffled off at this years show. The dog house will be displayed in booth 38. Tickets will be available for purchase from any member and at the booth.

440 THANK YOU

DON AND I would like to thank all the people who were so kind to send cards, prayers and phone calls; drives to Peterborough, caring for Tilly, and a shoulder to cry on. Thanks to the kind nurses and Dr. Thompson in Civic Hospital. Don is home now, then in again for another amputation. If the leg doesn't heal, then he will be confined to a wheelchair. Please keep Don in your prayers, thank you. Don and Ellen Holden.

450 IN MEMORIAM

McELWAIN - In loving memory of our dear mother, grandmother and great grandmother, Edna, who passed away May 31, 2001.
Always a smile, instead of a frown,
Always a hand, when one was down.
Always true, thoughtful and kind,
Wonderful memories she left behind.
Sadly missed and forever remembered by Bev and Marlene, Glenda, Pete and family, Gene and family.

McELWAIN, EDNA - In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, who left us May 31, 2001.
On the evening the angel came and took your hand,
We cried as you left for an unknown land.
But Heaven rejoiced as you came into sight,
For your soul was a diamond shining so bright.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For a part of us went with you,
To God's Heaven, your new home.
Forever in our hearts and never to be forgotten, Craig, Marg and Jason.
